A NEW SCHOOL BL

WOBURN PUBLIC LIBRARY WOBURN, MA 01801

PON THE FOUNDATIONS OF ANNER PRIDE AND THE SPIRIT OF THE YOUTH WHO EMBODIED IT

Containing a brand new slate, a new beginning, pure and white waiting, anticipating the impressions that would be left by those who walked through its halls, unable to contain its unbridled joy at the prospect of new individuals to christen its hallways, its classrooms, its stairwells, and benches.

Eager to begin its new life.

Freshmen, breathlessly entering a brand new school, bombarded by the green ingenuity of the school they now called a second home and the seemingly overwhelming task ahead of them. Four years completed in the new school, four years of memories and marks left in every conceivable way, fours years to truly call this Class of 2010 unique.

Coming into the world they engaged with new friends and new studies, taking on new challenges, molding their path along the Woburn Memorial High School line, leaving their mark in any way they could, determined not to be forgotten.

Years passed, memories grew, and the slate of the school, white at the start of their time here, was beginning to grow. Shades and bursts of color, fragmented and completed images told stories of hardship and triumph, reflected the mind of an artist, of a writer, of an athlete, of a physicist or a mathematician.

Spiraling swirls and patterns that accurately and genuinely pinpointed the marks left by each student, covered by the thousands upon thousands of vivid and long-lasting impressions that the individuals of 2010 had inspired and created.

Time flew, memories continued to grow, and friendships strengthened. No longer was the slate a white, innocent creation waiting to be fulfilled. A story had been drawn together by the individuals who each possessed some unique, innate ability, something that made them each stand out among the many stars present among the hues and tones of high school memories.

Determined to be remembered, to make a lasting impression on their fellow classmates and on their school, the class had come together, individuals, to ensure the rise of an impression upon the school that would undoubtedly last them a lifetime.

Four years later, the impression would definitely become a forever and always sort of impression, an impact, a mark left by a class of individuals who joined as one to truly stand out. To leave their mark on the school that had been their home for four years. That has been our home for four years.

Pass through those doors one final time. Look back on the memories we have created, the marks we have bestowed upon the white pallet of their school, the impressions that will forever remain in the corridors of Woburn High.

Look forward to the challenges we will face in life, to the new roads and new boundaries we will cross, bid a fond farewell to those you are leaving behind, smiling faintly with the realization that your mark has ensured you will not be forgotten.

Remember that every end brings a new beginning; consider this new journey another obstacle course, another white slate to fill. Never forget where you came from, the home we all shared, the home we all helped to brighten, the home that each of us left a distinct impression on.

Wherever you go in life, you will find the same beginnings that created your four years of high school.

Seize the opportunity and take that first step, leave your mark and make that lasting impression that will last a lifetime.

We'll all be waiting Send us a postcard

WHO SAYS YOU CAN'T GO HOME?

Welcome To The Wu

For many of us, Woburn has been the place we call our home for more or less seventeen years. Not only do we know the coolest places (like Breakers, Louie's, or Showcase Cinemas) to hang out with friends on Friday nights but we've also watched this city grow and change around us. How many people remember Bonds Shoe Store down in the center? Now yet another Dunkin' Donuts stands in it's place. What about Pinches and Pounds at the Woburn Mall? Or all the renovations the center went through to try and make it more appealing to the outside eye? Woburn might have changed a lot in the years we've been here but we too have changed by living here. Look around, no matter how small the mark, we have made an impression on this town and, in turn, it has left an impression on us by forever being our home.

A breathtaking view of Woburn Center in the Twilight. A view you can always look back on and remember.

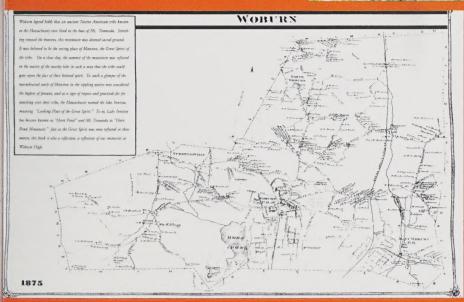

Woburn may be divided into many different sections but together they make up one town; our town. Can you find where you come from? How about noticing all the places you never found? Pretty cool huh?

life in

Fall--fall in New England means summer has ended, school is picking back up, the cold air is settling in (with a smattering of those unexpected, after summer heatwaves) and the breath-taking colors on the trees draw tourists from all over. It's a great time to spend outdoors with friends and family as the crisp air beckons you to the apple orchards and the pumpkin patches all over the area. So trade in your flip flops for sneakers, your shorts for pants, and your tank tops for jackets so you can take it all in before the first snow falls.

Winter--winter means freezer burn for many New Englanders as the temperatures drop (often to below zero in some places) and the snow begins to accumulate. For many adults winter is just another aggrivation to deal with but for kids and teens winter means praying for snow-days, sledding, skiing, and snowboarding with friends, hot chocolate by the fire and christmas magic in the air. So bundle up and hunker down until the ice thaws and budding flowers begin to emerge.

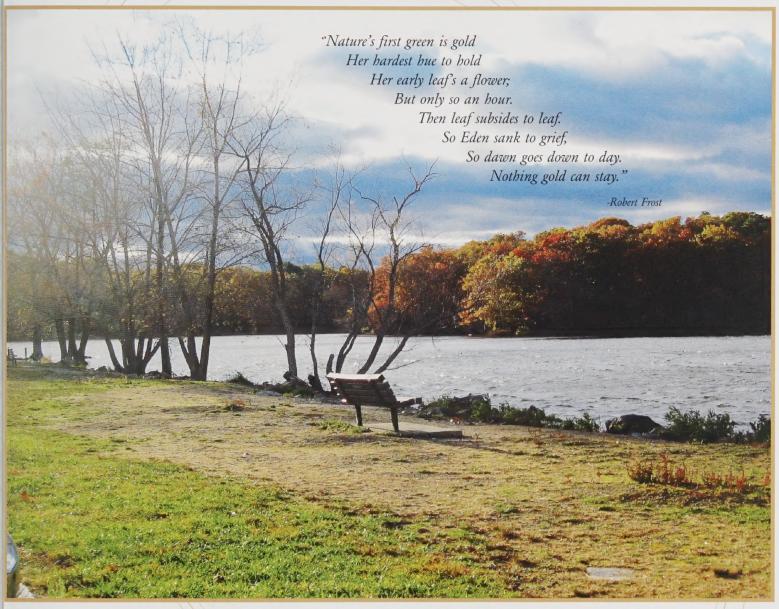

Summer-summer is all about fun in New England. Wherever you go you see flip flops, tank tops, and shorts walking through the streets taking in the sun. School's out and the kids are loving it! The word bored becomes a four letter word seeing as there is so much to do indoors and out. Theme parks have opened, beaches are packed, cookouts can be seen in almost every backyard at least once a week, and trips to the lake and the mountains are a must just to take in the beauty of summer sunrises and sunsets. Summer days are packed with fun and all those endless nights are spent just sitting back, star-gazing and enjoying the peaceful night air. So grab your friends and family, load up the car, and enjoy all that summer has to offer before the chilling air returns and snatches it away.

Spring--after a harsh New England winter the beauty and warmth of spring is welcomed with open arms. However, spring is also the time of year where the weather is most unpredictable; flip flopping back and forth from rain to sun and warmth to cold. None-the-less, you can't help but become awe-struck by the beauty of the new life emerging all over the area. And as the season goes on the weather grows warmer planting the idea of summer into the back of school kids minds. So shed your jackets, take in the fresh air and get ready to soak up the sun.

New England

A popular place for Woburn-ites to relax and clear their minds during the fall is peaceful Horn Pond. The 2.5 miles wrap-around is constantly filled with dogs, joggers, bikers, and the occasional person or two just relaxing and taking in the view.

rowing up in Massachusetts, we have all learned how to deal with the ever changing weather patterns of the New England area. We've learned that the weather channel will usually lie, what the air feels like in the morning will usually flip 180 degrees by noon, and, most importantly, we have learned that no matter what the season, anything is possible when you're living life in New England.

Who We Are

Traditions are a major part of Woburn Memorial High School. We all go to the Halloween Parade, Flag Day fireworks at Library Field, and many school events. Thanksgiving break wouldn't be any fun without the Pep Rally or the Thanksgiving day game against Winchester. All these traditions have been around since most of our parents attended Woburn High, and some even longer.

Our school motto, "Tanner Pride" was coined by Coach Peter Sullivan in the 1970's and it has become the words that pop into our heads whenever we think of Woburn High. We walk into the cafeteria and we see the black and orange words on a banner hanging at the entrance every day. Every game we go to has fans wearing Woburn colors cheering on the teams. Tanner Pride is seen through out the school in academics, clubs, activities and the everyday life of a student.

The name of our yearbook has also been one of our long lasting traditions. Every yearbook since the first book in 1947 has had the name Innitou on its cover. Woburn legend holds that an ancient Native American tribe known as the Massachusett once lived at the base of Mt. Towanda. It was believed to be the resting place of Manitou, the Great Spirit of the tribe. On a clear day, the summit of the mountain was reflected in the waters of the nearby lake in such a way that the tribe could gaze upon the face of their beloved spirit in the water. The Massachusett* named Lake Innitou "Looking Place of the Great Spirit." To us, Lake Innitou has become known as Horn Pond and Mt. Towanda as Horn Pond Mountain.

It is important for us to pass on all these traditions onto future students, hopefully they will make just as many great memories as we have. Even though we will all leave Woburn High and move on with our lives, the traditions and memories we have made will never be forgotten.

Dedication

Mrs. Kelly Curran

The Class of 2010, dedicates our edition of the Innitou yearbook to Mrs. Kelly Curran. Mrs. Curran has dedicated over fifteen years of service to the Woburn Public School System. Mrs. Curran teaches in the Alternative Education program. This program is for students who find the mainstream class setting difficult. She works in this self-contained program and contributes to the positive student growth in attitude, attendance, school knowledge and self-esteem of her students. The students in this program follow the curriculum in place of regular education. She also advises students with the work-study component which is an integral part of the program and is required for participation.

Mrs. Curran also holds the honorary title of being our Class Advisor. She greeted us as freshman with enthusiasm and has been a true leader for our class during our high school career. She has guided our class officers and the senior activities committee in planning our many class activities such as fund-raisers, dances, and proms. We are extremely lucky to have such a supportive advisor who is a teacher and a friend.

I Missions

"And because I found I had nothing else to write about, I presented myself as a subject"

Montainne

Life begins as a blank slate, pure and innocent, unused and unimpressed. No one knows what to make of it quite yet. After all, there are no pictures, no shades or hues, no marks. What can you expect from something so empty, devoid of a story or a name? But soon there will be a name. The first identification associated with the person, or the place, or the group. Names are the beginning. And they are not the end.

High school brought to the plate challenges that the rest of our lives had lacked until now. Stress was greater here, as more classes and more work piled onto our shoulders. Friendships strengthened and sometimes broadened. The youth of Woburn was brought together under one roof. New opportunities to grow were at hand. Freedoms were enriched, some more tempting than others, and it was up to each of us to handle them as maturely as possible and make the most of these new possibilities. Perhaps most importantly, high school, our chance to shine as an individual, to express our talents and discover new abilities. Here, the slate would flourish. Now young adults, we exploit those abilities and began to consider the opportunities that lay ahead. Hues of bright, vibrant colors spread out across the now blooming picture, creating a medley of colors that demonstrate each individual's abilities and successes, experiences and friendships, likes and dislikes, hopes and dreams. On the school, we left impressions of who we were, how we had contributed to student life and our community, how we had given the school a brilliant picture of an individual with a bright future. To our fellow classmates, we had given a somewhat one-sided impression of who we were on the outside. From others we gained different perspectives and impressions of each individual, perhaps never knowing the whole story. And onto us, the school gave a distinct impression that was separate and unique for the individual. All around us, impressions thrived and everyone must have known it. A motley crew with unique and diverse talents, we left the first full impression on the new school, the first class to stretch over four years, our growth over the years carefully catalogued. Our experiences influenced and molded us into the individuals we are today.

These memories and impressions contributed to our personalities, faint but not without a pulse. Because no one ever knows the whole story simply by looking at the cover of a book or reading the first chapter, or even reading the end. You need all the plot twists and witty comments in between, the hardships and successes, fledgling experiences in the beginning, and the lifechanging ones at the end. No one can read minds. No one can look at a person briefly, or just spend a year in class with them, and say they know every in and out. No one can determine who you really are just by watching you. Getting to know someone doesn't happen in one day, or maybe even in a year, and it certainly doesn't happen through assumptions. Impressions are the same, a double-edged sword.

To really know everything about someone, you can't just stand in your shoes and assume, can't make judgments based on your feelings. You might be right. Then again, maybe you're wrong. Everyone is unique, and some people don't express themselves wholly around classmates and peers. Maybe around close friends they really shine, glistening stars amidst a sea of gray. In reality, no two individuals are alike. Your impressions of someone based on their years in high school, or based on their attitude in class, might not be that accurate. You might have to look deeper, look harder, and train your eyes to see what lies underneath.

Stories are complicated paths that weave through thickets of thorns and rosebushes alike. Impressions come from every direction, blatant statements and faintest hints alike. So stop for a moment, and listen. Try to look beneath the surface, try to see what lies on the other side. You might be surprised by what you find.

Maybe someone's story is more similar to yours than you thought.

Elementary school is the first step, meeting new people and sharing laughs with one another. A new chapter opens into their life, and the start of something unique rises. Sleep-overs and birthday parties are firsts, as each child forms their own thoughts and feelings on life. And all the time, each child is impressed upon by friendships forged, the field days and parties and field trips shared, and the memories cherished as childhood moves forever forward.

Childhood memories are full of excitement, firsts, and childish fervor. See if you can remember some of these elementary activities.

Do you remember having lunch monitors and recess, playing kickball and on the swings, talking with friends. Everyone loved show and tell and Halloween parties. Days were reserved for things such as Grandparent's day, career day, teddy bear picnics, school plays, and the wedding of Q and U. Some schools raised ducklings, hamsters, chicks or other types of adorable animals that all little kids love.

Those are just a few elementary memories. You'll probably think of some on your own, too.

Trying to find a place in this

Middle school is another challenge entirely, the middle ground between entering high school and just leaving elementary school. Each child discovers their own abilities and talents, establishing new directions in their lives. Exciting new experiences are created, painting the surface with challenges and triumphs, more ties created. Entering middle school means harder classes, more responsibility, and the realization that the last step, high school, is just around the corner.

Do you remember our first encounters with clubs, sports teams, band and chorus? We had holiday concerts and spring feasts, magazines, yearbook and builder's club. Guest authors, artists, and bands visited the schools. There was the Kennedy Talent Show and the Green and Blue Revue, the McElheney Cup and 8th grade field day. The 8th grade visit to Washington D.C. or New York City, trips to Canobie Lake Park, and the 8th grade dance were all memorable.

Even though middle school only lasted for three years, it would bring us together soon enough. Both schools have numerous events that took place-see if you can remember some others.

Janel Paradise, Lindsay Aldorisio, and Lisa Cangiano take a groovy trip back to the 70s.

We were the first class to enter Woburn High as freshman, and would be the first class to spend four full years in the new high school. Our memories and experiences now affected both our lives and the life of the new school whose halls had yet to be filled with midday chatter and harmony among students.

The freshman class was eager and nervous, anxious to enter the school and begin their high school careers. We were confronted with even more responsibility, clubs, sports, and artistic opportunities. The memories of our freshman year impacted our course in high school and the direction that would shape the rest of our lives. And every memory, every experience, will be an impression that we'll always remember.

Do you remember 150 Year Anniversary of Woburn High School video and learning the school song, Black and Orange? And even when we felt lost, everyone else did, too, because the building was new. Our first pep rally was an abundance of school spirit that probably surprised everyone. The Lip Sync and the Dating Game were firsts, too. The dramatic shift from middle school to high school was probably overwhelming at first, but we eventually got the hang of it.

For us, this was the first time when we had classes with other grades, and the bells sounded more like beeps than anything else. The ominous staircases were killers for the first few weeks, and no one entertained the idea of walking up four flights of stairs at seven in the morning. Maybe we even took a spill going up the stairs. We were confronted with new challenges, more activities, and maturing as our dreams and talents were realized.

We've been in school together for four years.

Freshman year is a year of firsts. The Wu became our second home, and freshman anxiety gracefully drifted into a cool confidence as we surged towards sophomore year. We emerged as individuals bonding with one another as the two middle schools were brought together into one class. Over the summer we learned more about ourselves and began to discover that the possibilities were endless. Everything was falling into place, and sophomore year was going to bring new challenges. Still, we knew that the terrifying first year was over.

And the next three years would only bring more impressions and memories that we would cherish forever.

Freshman year was behind us. Now we were one step up on the ladder, still underclassmen but no longer the new kids on the block. We had one more inch of understanding in the school, we weren't getting lost quite as much, and the stairs were still deadly. Everyone was getting adjusted to new classes, moving up the ladder past the freshman but still looking up to juniors and seniors for guidance. Freshman anxiety evaporated and we began to take part in more activities-AP classes, Lip Sync, and many more. Sophomore year presented more challenges and gave us a sense of understanding about ourselves and our individual talents. As freshmen we were sometimes too nervous or inexperienced to participate in some activities, but sophomore year was different. Each new experience built on our core, and that small step would lead us to more personal realizations that would help us shape the route of our lives.

Do you remember our first experience with driving and permits, giving us more independence and freedoms? The English department thrived with memories-MA Hedges hosted sweater season, and Mr. Gang developed an interesting quote book. The drama club hosted Beauty and the Beast, with many of our own as leading roles. PSAT tests prepared us for our most important test since MCAS And Shakespeare's mysterious disappearance from Mr. Gangi's room permeated the air for few days, while their presence was (allegedly) greatly missed. Sophomore year brimmed with quirks and changes, most of them things that we didn't see coming. Everyone will take something away from this year, however interesting it might be. And we all learned something from those experiences.

It was pouring. That's the first thing you'll probably remember when you mink about the night of our sophomore sent the downpour. Some of us might remember taking an AP test that same day. Everyone was eager to get dismissed early to prepare for that night. And when we arrived, so did the rain. Luckily, dances are held indoors, so we detached from the rain as soon as we entered the school. Once inside, the scene in mediately changed. At first, everyone stood awkwardly and didn't approach the dance floor, but once a few people began to dance, the entre crowd joined together and enjoyed themselves. There were many great moments and andids to be shared that night, with friends at our first 'big' dance in high school. Those mem ries last longer few hours.

Freshman dance? Canceled. Homecomings? Fun...but nothing special. Sophmore Semi? That was fun...but this dance was different; this was prom. From the minute you woke up it was all you could think about. You had been planning this night all year and now it was finally here. Even if you were going dateless with just your friends you were still excited and ready to go.

Sitting through school was torture. The clock was moving so slowly it seems to be moving backwards. Looking around you could pick out the girls going to prom because they were walking around with sweatpants and t-shirts with their hair undone and minimal make-up on. They didn't care what they looked like during the day because they knew that come 2 p.m. they would be able to start the transformation from ugly duckling to beautiful swan.

And then it was time. Dresses and tuxes were on, hair was done, ties were tied, flowers had been exchanged, proud family pictures had been taken and you were on your way! ...You were on your way in the middle of a torrential downpour, but you were on your way nonetheless! Do you remember the feeling of walking through the doors of the Hilton and seeing everyone all dressed up? The scene was truly magical.

After everyone got settled and had eaten, it was time for the real fun to begin. We danced the night away and before we knew it the clock was winding down and the DJ was playing "Don't Stop Believin'" by Journey, signaling the end of the night. Slowly but surely we all made our way out of the hall and back into the rain. Our carriages might have turned back into pumpkins but the memories of that night will stay with us forever.

I've got a feeling... that tonight's gonna be

I HOPE YOU HAD THE TIME OF YOUR LIFE

This is it. We've reached the pinnacle, the top, finally accepted our role as seniors, leaders of the school. Everything culminates in this one year—all of our studies, our activities and talents, have come together. There was so much to look forward to, and so much more for us to accomplish. College was looming just around the corner, our minds racing as we juggled applications and schoolwork. Finally, the year we'd all been anticipating had arrived. Senior year spells out all of our achievements and demonstrates just how far we have come over the course of our young lives. And there was still more to come. As we progressed through senior year, we would have many new experiences, and some would stand out in our minds as vibrant impressions and pictures. Among them were Senior Prom, Senior Week, numerous other activities and events, and finally, Graduation. Live it up and cherish every moment, because we only have one senior year. And the story continues.

Eddie Tedesco also joined the political bandwagon this Halloween by dressing up as John Kerry. His prop of choice was a bottle of Heinz ketchup which he carried around with him all night.

Liz's Sky

The sky belonged to Liz. She loved to watch it, she loved to experience it. But the sky was merely a reflection of the strong spirit of Liz.

When you see a clear cloudless day, Remember being lost in Liz's deep magical eyes. When you see a wondrous sun setting in all its bright colors, Think of Liz's precious locks that reflected the last light of an amazing day.

When you feel the wind brushing against your skin so softly, Know that Liz is reaching from her sky to touch you. When you feel the warmth of the bright summer sun, Recall how Liz brought heat to everyone's heart that she knew. When the sky is filled with white puffy clouds, Look for the images the clouds form; As Liz is sending you a special message.

And when the sky is filled with millions of stars, Imagine Liz jumping from star to star; Looking down on us with love and kindness.

Today and Tomorrow and Many Moons to Follow, This will be Liz's sky. So look up to see Liz for she will see you. As you can never forget the sky, Nor will any of us forget our little Liz.

Even if you've never watched a sports game in your life, you can recognize the relationship; Red Sox – Yankees, Celtics – Lakers, Bruins – Canadiens. Major league rivals whose competitions have crossed generations. Each confrontation spells a new chapter in the constant thrum of adversary that dictates the ongoing stories of these teams. A solid rivalry creates unbelievable energy, each player determined to claim tonight's victory, wield that invisible trophy high, and prove that for the moment, they are the team to beat. Yet even in the face of such fierce determination, these teams must make an effort to show that they are much more than an extremely talented team with the skills to push forward.

Opposing teams are the greatest motivators of sports. Without some healthy competition, sports would be dull, lacking any of the action, thrill, and high stakes that fans crave. Every team strives to make a bold impression on their opponents, delivering a succinct message in tackles, goals, baskets or checks, speaking volumes about their skill and attitude. Our athletes dedicate strenuous hours of training and practice to make those dreams a reality. When Woburn meets other teams from surrounding towns, they want to return home with a victory, and more importantly, the satisfaction that their competition recognizes Woburn as a worthy opponent, a threat. That punishing reality evokes the thrill of competition. The impressions that teams leave on each other, demonstrated in raw talent, illustrate the excitement of competition.

While they might be dominating the field and hammering the competition without breaking a sweat, the values of their team stand out just a bit more. Woburn might slaughter an opponent, but they always want to give an impression of class, organization, and respectability, deserving of the tough reputation they might receive. Sportsmanship is critical to the relationships between opposing teams and the impressions they relay to each other. Every team wants to be recognized as worthy, respectful competitors. These impressions constitute the competitive aspect of sports, the drive to show other teams just how skilled they are, and the sportsmanship that upholds a team's reputation as a group of well-rounded individuals. These two walk coolly along the sidelines as a roaring crowd urges their team to victory. A team who shows incredible sportsmanship and demonstrates their skills will leave the greatest impression and be most revered.

At Woburn High, everyone recognizes that certain traditions leave a lasting impression on the school and the students who pass through. The pep rally has always been a cornerstone of high school life, along with the anticipated turkey toss, where Woburn annually exercises their unique willpower by stealing and returning the turkey to our pep rally without fail. It doesn't matter that we don't win—our impression is left by our theft each year. The Thanksgiving Day game is an annual tradition against our rivals in Winchester, our chance to show our rivals that the Tanners will come out on top this time.

Also, most students will notice that on the days of games or meets, athletes wear sweatshirts, tee-shirts, or uniforms in support of their teams. These emblazoned displays of school pride are essential to the impressions that sports leave on athletes and their fans. That is one innate tradition that will permeate the halls of Woburn High for years to come.

The impressions that teams give to their opponents—fear, respect, sportsmanship and good will— and those delivered to their respective schools and students—visions of team spirit, pep rallies and Thanksgiving Day games, turkey tosses and the theft of an innocent frozen turkey—are the ones that will remain in our memories for years down the road. They will be as long lasting and unforgettable as the traditions and rivalries that we as sports fans and players have come to know and love—spanning generations of athletes and fans, devotion and passion pulsing vividly.

"80% of the final exam will be based on the one lecture you missed and the one book you didn't read."

Growing up in America in the 21st century is both a trying achievement and a memorable experience. Every generation is influenced by the music of the era, the teenage drama and the trends revolving around their high school. their second home, moving in a breathtaking swirl of activity that sometimes has your mind reeling. Saying high school is the best four years of your life might be a stretch, but for the most part, it should be. You should enjoy every moment and revel fondly in the memories we shared with our class. For most of us, high school is a mutually shared headache combined with doses of entertainment, gossip, and culture that revolve constantly around our lives and teenage vears.

Many aspects of youth culture encompass the life and vitality of Woburn High, pulsing in hallways and classrooms. Each student is struck by something at their high school, a statement or high school event. Immunity to youth pop culture and its trends is inconceivable. The spotlights, visual displays, and melodies that whistle and wind throughout the hallways are bound to affect someone. Especially when dealing with a group of teenagers whose individuality burns brightly.

Student life at Woburn High is not only hopelessly attached to the trends of our culture and generation, the fashion and styles, but also to the events that provide a social and charitable outlet for us at school. Events like the Relay for Life, Lip Sync and the Dating Game have provided a timely excuse for students to join together for a common cause, even if it's in the entertainment department. Dances are present in every high school student's life, and no high school graduation would be complete without a visit to at least one dance during our four year stay. Impressions from these storied events will always be in full swing at Woburn High.

No impression of student life would be complete without examining the artistic and musically inclined. Rock and rap have defined our generation, and for the most part battled it out equally. Our generation has a diversified and sometimes eccentric musical culture. The band is no exception. Marching band performs for frozen fans at football games, while the concert and jazz band partake in winter and spring concerts, giving a melodious background to the jumbled and boisterous fandom of high school life. Breaking the monotone of conversation and banter between friends is the artistic side of student life, giving a distinct name to the creativity that surrounds our youth. These programs serve as the much needed creativity that separates the sometimes tedious endeavors of a typical high school day from the more creative ones. Our culture is influenced by these cherished aesthetic foundations upheld by students each year, making high school not only exciting but also inspiring.

There is never a dull moment at Woburn High, teeming with the hum of creative minds at work, the flutter of intelligent brains performing at top speed, and the constant traffic of students in the hallways, conversation filtering through six buildings and four floors. Culture and inspiration have always played a leading role in the never ending film that documents student life and the youth of each generation. Just as important are the influences during school. Every senior takes with them an endless array of memories and individual interests that captured their attention during those four precious years. And even more so are the impressions that we leave on the school, each building gathering memories and images of that generation's quirks, the culture and life this group of young individuals brought to those hallways.

Every generation fosters new cultural traditions with pride and admiration. We create and govern our own world with a vibrant culture and members willing and determined to practice tradition insistently, both making and taking away impressions from this time adoringly. Each world is unique. And as their experiences grow, the impressions given and received increase. So the impressionist cycle continues.

Connect with your inner rock star or vocalist, jam to a few tunes, and maybe compose a song. It's your call—whether you're into choral, classical, jazz, rock, or alternative, make yourself at home. Music has something for everyone. Just find the right notes, settle into a rhythm, and let those harmonies flow.

Homecoming 2009

Homecoming, one of the favorite Woburn High traditions. The dance was held on the Friday before Thanksgiving break, so that everyone would get pumped up for the annual Thanksgiving Day game against Winchester. The girls wore their fancy dresses and the boys put on their dress shirt and tie. This was the last time that the seniors would dance together with all four grades and the last time they would be at a school dance. DJ Dan provided the music as everyone danced from 7:00 pm until 10:00 pm. Carrier and Ulia Shaughnessy were voted King and Queen of the night.

"The best teachers teach from the heart, not from the book."

-Unknown

Every student has at least one teacher who they have admired and been inspired by throughout their high school career. These teachers and advisors have devoted countless time and effort to educating the next generation and giving every child the best education they can achieve, provided, of course, that every student works to their full potential. The faculty at Woburn High is committed to giving each student the chance to achieve their dreams and learn everything possible about the world and themselves. These are people who, along with friends and family, will push them to strive to greater heights and leave a lasting impression.

English, mathematics, science, art, and music—departments housing faculty who are determined to create a welcoming environment for their students, to bring out the best in each student. Sometimes the task can be tedious, but whatever the challenge, the faculty is able and willing to awaken the inner talents of their students, teaching us to embrace our strengths and learn from our mistakes. There is no doubt that each student is affected by a faculty member, and the impact will carry through college and the rest of our lives. Lessons learned in high school are not always taught through textbooks, rigorous exams or papers. The most valuable lessons are often attuned directly to each student's unique personality and talents. Vigorously, the faculty works to make a lasting impression on their students, to remind them of their gifts, teach them to accept setbacks and work through them. Favorite teachers inspire and guide students as they follow their own path, a path not set in stone, constantly shifting as experiences in life alter its course. Gratefully, every student will thank a few teachers in their life for the unlimited support and life lessons they received from them. Impressions given by faculty to students are often the most valuable.

Also admirable, are the impressions and memories that faculty members leave on the school and their fellow faculty. These people leave a great mark, in some way, on the history of the school and the minds of those they worked with. Hallways and classrooms are changed by the faculty who pass through them, and the story of Woburn High is affected by the unique and talented teachers that reside within its walls. Any high school would agree that the history of their school, as a community, is shaped by teachers past and present. As a fledgling building, new to the ranks, the face of Woburn High is and will shift continuously in a whirlwind of activity as new faculty arrives and older faculty prepares to say goodbye. Everyone can agree that these impressions will last a lifetime. Many years will pass and an infinite number of memories and impressions left by faculty past and present will mark those halls, weaving intricate designs spinning tales that some remember while others have since forgotten. The impressions left by faculty old and new will be a gracious reminder of the time they shared at Woburn High.

The impressions received and given by faculty are numerous, and undoubtedly they are struck by a few students throughout their career, the number growing each year, some youth having a knack for leaving their imprint on others. There are always students who will leave an impression on faculty, whether they excelled in their studies or provided an insightful viewpoint to class discussions. A few will be etched into memory, vivid reminders of a period seven class or a student destined to make it big in their field. All of these marks are carved into Woburn High's memory, fond memories of a time spent by each class in those halls, everything intertwined, able to withstand the test of time.

Graduating Faculty

One of Mr. Hodgson's favorite memories was when he was taken totally by surprise at our first Winterfest Concert in the new high school in December of 2006. The entire school committee, Dr. Batchelder, Mr. Donovan, all of our principals, numerous teachers and alumni appeared.

At first he thought it was because this was the first Fine Arts performance in the new facility. But everyone surprised him with the presentation of naming the preforming arts center after him. "This is a memory that will live with me forever!"

Mr. Robert Hodgson

Mr. Hodgson began his career in September 1965 at the old Woburn High School teaching Concert Choir and Music Theory courses to grades nine through twelve. "H" will miss all the hundreds of wonderful students in Concert Choir, Show Choir, Music Theory classes and Broadway Show musical productions that he has worked with over the years. He feels his former students have become part of his extended family.

"Follow your dreams and always let music be a part of your life."

Teachers

Paint their minds and guide their thoughts Share their achievements and advise their faults

Inspire a Love of knowledge and truth As you light the path Which leads our youth

For our future brightens with each lesson you teach Each smile you lengthen Each goal you help reach

For the dawn of each poet each philosopher and king Begins with a Teacher And the wisdom they bring

by Kevin William Huff

If I Could Teach You, Teacher

If I could teach you, teacher, I'd teach you how much more you have accomplished than you think you have. I'd show you the seeds you planted years ago that are now coming into bloom. I'd reveal to you the young minds that have expanded under your care, the hearts that are serving others because they had you as a role model. If I could teach you, teacher, I'd show you the positive effect you have had on me and my life. Your homework is to know your value to the world, to acknowledge it, to believe it. Thank you, teacher.

Our pages are sent electronically to our publisher Herff Jones in Gettysburg, PA. The pages are color corrected, checked for accuracy and layout consistency, and organized. Then it is off to the presses where they are checked for ink consistency, folded, collated, stitched and bound. At the end of these stages, the pages get their final approval, are packed, and shipped to us for your yearbook ceremony in May.

Dear Classmates.

This yearbook is the product of our dedication and determination. In the spirit of impressions, we wanted to be sure that every page would accurately reflect the memories that we all shared. We worked extremely hard every day and we had fun along the way. We hope that the embodiment of impressions and our enthusiasm will speak to you, our class. We really enjoyed making this yearbook, and we hope that you will enjoy reading it. Hopefully, this yearbook will be an impression too, a recollection of all the memories of our time at Woburn High. Sincerely,

Angela Filardo, Christina Freitas, Cameron Lesperance, Sabrina McCauley, Kate Riley, Elyssa Roketenetz, and Amanda Stuart

The show featured trainers using hand signals to instruct the whales to leap, twirl and wave to or splash the audience. AN OVERTIME VICTORY in hockey gave Canada the Olympic gold the host nation craved on the last day of Winter Games. The 3-2 win over Team U.S.A. came 7:40 into the extra period when 22-year-old Sidney Crosby sent goalie Ryan Miller a surprise wrist shot. ## Woburn Memorial High School

A NEW SCHOOL

MAY - - 2010

WOBURN PUBLIC LIBRARY WOBURN, MA 01801

UPON THE FOUNDATIONS OF ANNER PRIDE AND THE SPIRIT OF THE YOUTH WHO EMBODIED IT

Containing a brand new slate, a new beginning, pure and white waiting, anticipating the impressions that would be left by those who walked through its halls, unable to contain its unbridled joy at the prospect of new individuals to christen its hallways, its classrooms, its stairwells, and benches.

Eager to begin its new life.

Freshmen, breathlessly entering a brand new school, bombarded by the green ingenuity of the school they now called a second home and the seemingly overwhelming task ahead of them. Four years completed in the new school, four years of memories and marks left in every conceivable way, fours years to truly call this Class of 2010 unique.

Coming into the world they engaged with new friends and new studies, taking on new challenges, molding their path along the Woburn Memorial High School line, leaving their mark in any way they could, determined not to be forgotten.

Years passed, memories grew, and the slate of the school, white at the start of their time here, was beginning to grow. Shades and bursts of color, fragmented and completed images told stories of hardship and triumph, reflected the mind of an artist, of a writer, of an athlete, of a physicist or a mathematician.

Spiraling swirls and patterns that accurately and genuinely pinpointed the marks left by each student, covered by the thousands upon thousands of vivid and long-lasting impressions that the individuals of 2010 had inspired and created.

Time flew, memories continued to grow, and friendships strengthened. No longer was the slate a white, innocent creation waiting to be fulfilled. A story had been drawn together by the individuals who each possessed some unique, innate ability, something that made them each stand out among the many stars present among the hues and tones of high school memories.

Determined to be remembered, to make a lasting impression on their fellow classmates and on their school, the class had come together, individuals, to ensure the rise of an impression upon the school that would undoubtedly last them a lifetime.

Four years later, the impression would definitely become a forever and always sort of impression, an impact, a mark left by a class of individuals who joined as one to truly stand out. To leave their mark on the school that had been their home for four years. That has been our home for four years.

Pass through those doors one final time. Look back on the memories we have created, the marks we have bestowed upon the white pallet of their school, the impressions that will forever remain in the corridors of Woburn High.

Look forward to the challenges we will face in life, to the new roads and new boundaries we will cross, bid a fond farewell to those you are leaving behind, smiling faintly with the realization that your mark has ensured you will not be forgotten.

Remember that every end brings a new beginning; consider this new journey another obstacle course, another white slate to fill. Never forget where you came from, the home we all shared, the home we all helped to brighten, the home that each of us left a distinct impression on.

Wherever you go in life, you will find the same beginnings that created your four years of high school.

Seize the opportunity and take that first step, leave your mark and make that lasting impression that will last a lifetime.

We'll all be waiting Send us a postcard
